Interested in a part-time job?
Want to learn more about your health?
Motivated to help other Diabetic patients?

If so, you are a great candidate to become a community coach!

Project Description:
University of California Irvine (UCI) Center for Health Policy Research is conducting a study focused on improving healthcare for Diabetes Type II patients. This study focuses on: 1) providing patients with individualized treatment information; 2) teaching skills for using the information to negotiate a treatment regimen more consistent with the patient’s lifestyle, cultural and social circumstances; and 3) empowering the patient for a more active role in care immediately preceding a regularly scheduled visit with his/her primary care doctor.

The study consists of an intervention program in which trained individuals will meet with diabetes patients at one of the UCI medical clinics and assist patients in improving communication with their doctors. The goal is to help patients become more proactive and involved in their healthcare and ultimately lead to an overall improvement in their healthcare.

Benefits:
- Get paid as a part-time UCI employee (10-12 hours per week).
- Learn more about Diabetes and how to improve your own health.
- Work alongside UCI doctors, researchers, and patients.
- Help Diabetic patients.

Requirements:
1. Has Type 2 Diabetes
2. Possess a high school education or equivalent.
3. Skills to establish priorities, meet deadlines, perform work independently.
4. Must be available for work during the 9 - 5 pm work hours

Contact Information:
Please contact [Name] Project Director at [phone number] or email: [e-mail] for more specific details about the position.